PARIS FASHION WEEK – ELENI KYRIACOU – CONSTRUCTIVISM & KINETICS

Eleni Kyriacou's architectural background always filters through into her collections. Her work starts from a concept and for SS 2015, her inspiration comes from the work of the constructivist sculptor, Naum Gabo. Naum Gabo's most famous work is that of a sculpted female bust – sculpted through space, defined through planes.

Where Naum Gabo defines space through a skin of strings, planes (curved and flat) and 'halo' lines, Eleni defines her space by the use of tassels and ropes. She also collages with the female form.

The colour palette of black, red, gold, stone and camel drawn from Gabo's painting and sculpture is cleverly contrasted in a collection that is both majestic and elegantly sexual. The kinetic feature of the moving female body under the constructed garment – the skin perceived through her trimmings – creates a multidimensional effect!

This is one of Eleni Kyriacou's most exciting collections to date. Eleni Kyriacou is a participating costume designer for The Interior Designers' Pantomime at the The Bloomsbury Theatre from the 28 October 2014 – Saturday, 1 November 2014.
